“The AMA encourages physicians everywhere to advise patients to return to work at the earliest date compatible with health and safety and recognizes that physicians can, through their care, facilitate patients’ return to work”. 2004
What about disability

"How do you know I have a learning disability?
— Maybe you have a teaching disability!"
Medical Aspects of Disability
(for Medical Professionals)

Education:

1. Understanding the difference between impairment, limitations, restrictions and disability.

2. Knowing your medical role. Address limitations, expected functional capacity, and restrictions accurately; making determinations that are either evidence based or supported by sound medical reasoning.

4. Understanding the importance of your determination; remembering that an inaccurate determination (either way) is costly to both the patient and society.
